For most published works (e.g., journal articles, book chapters), a prepublication copy of the final manuscript, as accepted after peer/editorial review is available for download. While this copy is virtually identical to the final published version, it is not the copy of record. For example, accepted publications often undergo additional copyediting and updating prior to being posted online. Please use the citation associated with the copy of record (i.e., the citation listed on the website) when referencing these works.

Reprints are for individual use only, please do not upload to any third-party commercial repository (e.g., ResearchGate) without permission from the author.
